

There needs to be a widely accessible daily and weekly planner by Google to ensure that the current crop of students in academia can easily track all of their assignments and duties that they have to tend to.

Details:

There should be an application or website by Google that acts as a daily, weekly and monthly planner that is focused on tracking assignments and duties for students that are currently in academia. This will make it much easier for college students to track all of their assignments, clubs, parties and any other duties that they have to attend to. Google calendar is currently a resource but that is more for long term planning and most students pursuing a higher education usually need to plan more short rather than long term.
